The Hillhead experience!

In 1926 The Quarry Managers' Journal mounted its first working exhibition of quarry plant and equipment in conjunction with the Institution of Quarry Managers Annual Conference at Llandrindod Wells in mid Wales. The show was deemed to be a great success and, 88 years later, QMJ will be presenting the latest edition of the world's biggest and best working quarry show at Hillhead Quarry near Buxton in England's Pennine Hills from 24-26 June 2014.

The last show in 2012 continued with the tradition of providing an event experience that is unique to Hillhead:-

- Rugged and dramatic setting
- Vast range of plant, equipment, materials and services for the quarrying, construction and recycling industries
- Over 450 leading international exhibitors
- Largest excavator ever displayed in UK – 320 tonnes
- Three separate demonstration areas – quarry face, crushing and screening & recycling
- Over 75 machines on working demonstration duty
- 175 stands in indoor pavilions

Defying the recession, the show attracted a total of 16,765 visitors – an increase of 9% on the previous event. Also, this total included 1,357 international visitors from no less than 87 different countries of the world - a new record.

The Hillhead formula of mixing the colour and scale of a large outdoor event with the attractions of plant and equipment doing a real job of work is a proven winner with visitors from this sector. And, if you have something you want to promote to the construction and minerals industries, please feel free to call either me or one of the other members of the Hillhead team to discuss the stand options available for 2014.

Demonstrations

The working demonstration areas give the Hillhead show its unique atmosphere; in 2012, no less than 75 machines were being put through their paces. For 2014 the organisers would welcome discussions about demonstrations of the type of equipment referred to below as well as anything else which is new, different or with a special interest value.

Quarry Face

In 2012 the quarry face was dominated by a large Trommel screen and the clean stone it produced was then loaded and transported to the working equipment in the adjacent crushing and screening demo area.

Crushing and Screening

The crushing and screening area runs the full length of the western side of the quarry and will accommodate six complete operations to process around 5,000t of limestone during the course of the show.

Recycling

The area at the south end of the site is set aside for various types of recycling activities such as the processing of general construction and demolition waste, reject concrete blocks and waste asphalt. Demonstrations of shredding wood and green waste are also possible by arrangement.

Mobile Plant

The demonstration areas are serviced by around 40 excavators, loading shovels and dumptrucks from all the major manufacturers. Environmental equipment such as dust suppression bowsers and fog cannons are used extensively and space is usually available for demonstrating specialised equipment such as laser levelling devices, trenchers and excavator-mounted attachments of all kinds

Supervision

All working demonstrations on site will take place under the control of Mike Phillips, General Manager of the Institute of Quarrying and his team.

Costs

There is no charge for the use of the demonstration area unless special arrangements have to be made at the request of the exhibitor. All space and facilities are subject to availability.

Marketing and visitor engagement

Hillhead 2014 will be subject to extensive promotion in print and digital media both in the UK and to visitor communities in overseas markets. The print media coverage comes through advertising and editorial coverage in a wide range of trade magazines serving the extractive and construction industries in the UK and overseas. This will be supported by the distribution of 450,000 multilingual brochures and visitor invitation tickets via selected media partners, mailings to previous visitors to the show and by Hillhead exhibitors circulating information and invitations to their customers around the world.

With digital media becoming an ever more important, the Hillhead 2014 strategy will be to build on the experience gained in 2012 when traffic through the show web site reached new record levels with a total of 69,068 unique visitors (up 50% on 2010), 109,374 visits and 448,666 page views. Regular email bulletins were also sent.

In order to provide visitors to the show with mobile event data the first Hillhead App was launched in May 2012. Although event Apps are still in their infancy, 1,343 Hillhead visitors downloaded the App in the three weeks before the show.

2012 also saw the launch of the Hillhead Interactive Event Planner which proved popular with visitors wishing to develop a planned schedule of visits to stands at the show. A total of 6,421 unique visitors used this facility and the average time spent on the system was 9 minutes 11 seconds.

The Hillhead Facebook page is used to cater for plant enthusiasts who like to use this form of social media and, in 2012, daily updates and photos were posted throughout the build period as individual exhibits arrived on site, with the massive 320t Caterpillar 6030 excavator attracting the most interest.
